PLAQUEMINES PARISH MAINTAINS CLOSE COLLABORATION WITH CITRUS AND NURSEY FARMERS AMIDST CHALLENGING WEATHTER CONDITIONS

Plaquemines Parish, LA- In the face of the unprecedented cold weather affecting half of our country, Plaquemines Parish President Keith Hinkley remains in constant communication with the citrus and nursery farmers in the community. As a resilient community with a rich agricultural history, our farmers are well-versed in their operations and adept at adjusting to varying weather conditions.

Acknowledging the significant impact of the extreme cold on the agricultural sector, President Hinkley assures the growers of Plaquemines Parish that the government is committed to providing support within its means. Emphasizing the strength of our community, President Hinkley expresses confidence that, just as in the past, Plaquemines Parish will endure and overcome the challenges posed by the cold weather.

"We are a strong community that has overcome many obstacles, and the cold weather is something that we will endure and overcome as well," affirms President Hinkley.
